GETTING READY FOR COMPETITON

Mary Had a Little Lamb -- And So Did Donna Heuser

By NANCY STANCILL

Donna Heuser doesn't raise lambs for profit these days.

"I'll probably just break even," the 16-year-old South San Francisco High School student said Friday.

Donna is one of 29 San Mateo County young people participating in the Junior Grand National Rodeo, Horse Show and Livestock Exposition at the Cow Palace. The event began Friday and will continue through April 13.

Friday the huge, straw-filled livestock barns at the Cow Palace were swarming with teen-agers and younger children. They painstakingly groomed their animals and chattered excitedly with friends.

Donna, a dark-haired, attractive young woman, curried the two crossbred market lambs she had entered in the exposition. She has been raising lambs for competition as a 4-H Club member for more than three years.

Donna explained that she probably has invested $100 in each lamb, counting the cost of feed as well as the original purchase price.

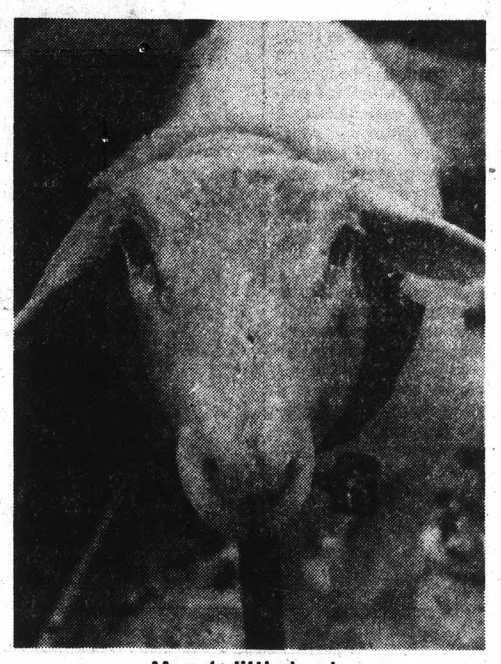
"Starsky and Hutch," the two lambs she brought to show, were scheduled to be auctioned today. Donna said she doubted that she would make more than a $10 profit on each animal.

So did the mustachioed man in the cowboy shirt standing nearby. Donna's father, James Heuser, is the "farm boss" of the 4-H Farm, located on Hillside Boulevard in South San Francisco. Heuser watches the 4-H members raise their animals there.

He shook his head sadly over the amount of money they realize for their efforts.

But Donna reminded him that what they lack in profit, they make up for in experience.

"I enjoy raising the animals. I like to show at exhibitions," she explained.



Mary's little lamb

The El Camino High School student pointed out where Starsky's back and belly had been shaved for judging.

"That's so you can see the lamb's finish — whether it's young and healthy," she explained with an authoritative air.

Is she sad that the animal she has raised will be sold for slaughter?

"You should learn not to be attached to the animals," she said decisively. "It was hard with my first lamb, but you have to realize that you have to have meat."

Donna's friend and fellow 4-H member, Teri Martin, said she has solved the problem of becoming attached to her livestock.

Teri, who entered a lamb, has kept the "ram lamb" or breeder as a pet or sorts and she lavishes her affection on the animal she knows won't be sold.

Water Rationing Hearing Planned

Daly City's City Council Monday night decided to set a public hearing to find out how people feel about a water rationing ordinance.

The council will set a date at the regular meeting April 11. The hearing will probably be within a month.

Mayor Albert Teglia said he is "elated" to report that Daly City's current water usage is 29 per cent below last year's consumption levels.

He noted that the drop is 4 per cent more than the 25 per cent cutback San Francisco requires of users of the Hetch Hetchy System.

Teglia then brought up a philosophical question. Will Daly City's water users feel insulted by a water rationing ordinance when they have cut back so commendably?

Several residents at the meeting expressed opinions that water users would react that way.

"Let people use their initiative for a change," said Steve Courter, citing the results produced by volunteer efforts. "Don't stick them for something, penalize them. Give them a little respect."

Julius Castelan agreed, noting that "people have answered the call you've made to them voluntarily."

However, City Manager David Rowe noted that "people continually call about neighbors who aren't conserving water. In a public hearing, you may hear people who conserve water say to adopt an ordinance."

City Attorney Albert Polonsky advised the council to proceed with the proposed public hearing "to prepare legal findings" for possible adoption of the ordinance at a later date.

"If people are doing well with conservation, it won't hurt them," Polonsky noted.

Rowe reminded council members that "San Francisco compels cooperation from all its water buyers. Penalties for municipalities exceeding the 25 per cent less allocation are very stiff."

The council took a look at a list of "general provisions" for a water ordinance prepared by Rowe, who said the guidelines followed the model ordinance prepared recently by the Bay Area Water Users Association.

Rowe's guidelines pointed out expected ways to achieve a 25 per cent residential and commercial reduction and provided for an "exception or adjustment" process.

The city manager recommended not imposing a 25 per cent reduction on the 32 per cent of Daly City customers who use less than 800 cubic feet per bimonthly billing. He noted that a cubic foot equals 7.4 gallons of water.

There would be no criminal penalties for exceeding the allocation, Rowe said.

However, the customer would face an excess water usage charge, a proposed $1 per 100 cubic feet beyond allocation.

In addition, the water division could be authorized to install flow-restricting devices on the premises of the abuser and a fee would be charged.

Rowe said water rates would not be set in the proposed ordinance until San Francisco sets a pattern, but he recommended higher rates for higher water usage.

Mayor Pro Tem William Schumacher asked the council to study setting allocations per person instead of per household.

"Marin County does it that way and it seems to be the most equitable formula," he said.

But Councilman Victor Kyriakis said he feels that Daly City is not in as severe straits as Marin and "it's equitable to keep the community functioning in the way it is used to."

Councilman McRobert Stewart noted that Daly City is in better shape than many Peninsula communities because much of its watger supply is from city wells.

In other study session matters, the council:

- Discussed future study of relocating the Community Services Center to a location more central than its present Westlake Avenue and Mission Street office. Daly City rents the offices from Jennie Dentoni for $295 monthly and rental will go to $320 under a proposed 1977 contract.
- Discussed a probable action to abolish a loading zone on Mission Street which had raised the ire of Mission Street merchants due to displaced parking spaces.
- Looked at a proposal to change Mission Street lighting from 400-watt mercury vapor to either 150 or 250-watt high pressure sodium illumination. The change is proposed for cost and energy saving.

Suicide-Murder In Broadmoor

An apparent argument over the late return of a hand cart ended in the shotgun slaying of one man and the suicide of another in Broadmoor yesterday.

The victims were tentatively identified by Officer Al Nickas as Clifford Krugler and John A. Cinelli. Both men appeared to be elderly. They had lived as neighbors on A Street in the small community of Broadmoor.

At about 8 a.m. yesterday, Nickas said, Cinelli reportedly was returning a hand cart when an argument erupted and Krugler shot Cinelli in the head with what is believed to be a 4-10 single shot shotgun.

Krugler then brandished the weapon at a passing newspaper delivery man, Randy Pejakovich, 22, of San Francisco.

As Pejakovich ducked he heard a second shot, looked up and saw Cinelli lying outside the garage in a pool of blood and Krugler inside the garage on his back with a shotgun nearby.

Pop Hoodwinks His Employer

By GEORGE KIRCHHUBEL
As Told to Frank LaPierre

(A continuing series of reminiscences about old days in Daly City-Colma.)

Joe "Pop" Brown was a good-hearted fellow. He'd give you the coat off his back, except no one wanted the coat off his back. At least not the coat he wore during that cold winter more than 30 years ago.

Somehow, Pop had fallen heir to a sheepskin coat that was several sizes too big for him. It was about this time he was working as a dishwasher at a Top of the Hill Mission Street restaurant in Daly City.

What amazed me were the amount and variety of things Pop could tuck into that great sheepskin coat.

One morning, while I was working behind my bar, in walks Pop wearing this sheepskin, looking all the world like some big hairy animal. From under the coat he produces a big liverwurst and asked for a knife. Now this liverworst was about five inches thick and at least two feet long.

Carefully, Pop sliced off a few pieces and, together, we sat and munched away at what he called his loaf of greyhound."

After he wandered out of my bar, he went on down the street, popping first into one bar and then into another, all the while slicing away at his liverwurst loaf.

Soon the entire roll had been eaten by Pop and his many "friends."

The next day I was sitting in the restaurant where Pop was washing dishes when "Ray" from the telephone company walked in for lunch. I never did find out what Ray's last name was.

Ray asked the waitress for a liverwurst sandwich on rye bread and she called in his order to the cook, who also happened to be the owner of the establishment.

The cook-owner walked to the refrigerator and came back empty-handed with a confused expression on his face.

After standing silently for a second, the cook walked back to the refrigerator, looked around once again and came back out.

"I can't understand it, Ray. Just the other day I bought a five-pound roll of liverwurst and now it's all gone. The night shift must have had a run on liverwurst," the owner explained.

A couple of days later, I was back in the restaurant for breakfast.

Pop was washing dishes and he seemed happy. It was soon evident to me that Pop had been sneaking a few drinks when the boss' back was turned.

The owner also sensed Pop was less than sober and began looking around for the whiskey bottle that the old man had apparently hidden away. Unable to find the bottle, the owner walked back to the front of the restaurant and stood scratching his head.

"I Remember"

Pop watched with a smile, apparently knowing he had once again outwitted his employer. Pop sidled over to me at the counter and said, "Go to the restroom, but stop by the sink. I want to show you something, George."

I did what he said.

Pop lowered his voice and confided, "This monkey knows I'm drinking his booze and he wants to catch me doing it. But, I'll tell you George, he never will."

Reaching into an open beer case, Pop pulled out an open pint of beer and with one gulp finished the bottle.

"He's too stupid to look for my beer bottle here in the beer case, George," Pop smiled

The owner did know, however, that he was buying far more beer than he was selling and, when it came time to renew his beer license, the owner decided not to sell beer anymore.

Without beer, the dishwashing job no longer had any appeal to Pop. He quickly left the restaurant in search of work elsewhere.

There were other things Pop could do besides clean up, tend bar and wash dishes, he bragged.

He said he was a top notch chef. And, like a fool, I believed him.

One day, when Pop asked me if he could cook up a spaghetti feed for lunch, I agreed. I'm sorry I did.

First I gave Pop two bucks to buy the spaghetti noodles, not knowing that he had already grabbed a five-pound box of spaghetti somewhere else.

Pop pocketed the two dollars and went into my small kitchen.

In a few minutes, He came back out and asked for a couple of cooking pots. I gave him the pots and went back to tending the bar, paying little mind to what Pop was doing in the back room.

Pop came back out and asked me for some salt and a couple more pans. I gave them to him and he ducked back into the kitchen where he soon he cheerfully announced through the curtained doorway, that he had the water boiling.

Some time later, I heard Pop cursing, but I chose to ignore thim. Pop came back out and asked me for another pot and I gave him it to him.

"What in the world are you doing back there, Pop?" I asked.

He didn't answer, although I heard much activity and could hear him cursing.

"I need another pot, George," Pop shouted.

"You've already got all my pots back there," I answered.

All of a sudden, Pop hurried out of the kitchen and left the bar cursing.

"Where are you going?" I yelled. "What about the spaghetti lunch?"

"The hell with it, I'm going home," Pop shouted back.

I went into the kitchen and stopped cold in my tracks.

It looked like a brawl had torn the kitchen to pieces. My big aluminum pot — the pride of my cooking utensils — was sitting on the two burner gas stove with spaghetti stuck to the sides and caked to the inside.

There was a trail of spaghetti leading to all my other pots scattered about the kitchen. When I finally got through cleaning up, the garbage can was filled.

And I ended up eating lunch at the Greek's restaurant down the street.

Medevac May Transport To More SF Facilities

San Mateo County's emergency medical ambulance service took on a bi-county look Tuesday when county supervisors authorized ambulances to transport persons to any hospital in San Francisco.

The original contract limited to transporting of county patients to four named hospitals in San Francisco. But now, the ambulances can take county patients to any hospital in San Francisco.

The amendment to the contract was necessary for two reasons, according to County Manager David L. Nichols. First, many critical care services — such as burn victims, care for high-risk infants, spinal injury victims, and multiple trauma victims — are

Helping Trace Illegal Explosives

One Dynamite Criminalist

By RICK SULLIVAN

Bombs are not a particularly explosive subject with Paul Dougherty.

San Mateo County's chief criminalist takes a rare clinical view of the deadly devices, delineating at length their chemical properties and ways in which law enforcement authorities can better trace their all too often illegal source.

In a cluttered cubicle, perhaps more appropriately set at London's Number 10 Baker St. than on the third floor of the Hall of Justice in Redwood City, Dougherty talks of a recent conference in Pittsburgh where the subject of bombs dominated discussion.

Dougherty joined his colleagues from Dade County, Florida, Allegheny County, Pa., and New York City, plus representatives of the FBI and the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in developing with manufactuers of explosives a program called "tagging."

Behind a desk stacked with the small tools of a forensic scientist and dusty, old armaments manuals, Dougherty explains that manufacturers have tentatively agreed to mix coded particles with their explosives to help investigators trace the source of bombs used by terrorists and other criminals.

He identifies the manufactures as Gulf, DuPont, Hercules and Apache.

"Traditionally, law enforcement authorities have had great difficulty in detecting what kind of an explosive was used and where it came from after detonation," Dougherty says.

He continues loudly, in obvious competition with a Russian symphony blaring from an early-century style radio.

"My thought was that if we could get manufacturers of such high explosives as dynamite to place tags in them then we could determine where the bomb came from. That, of course," he shrugs, "is a prerequisite for tracking down a suspect."

Dougherty is a bomb expert. The veteran sleuth maintains one of the few crime laboratories, outside of the FBI, with extensive data on explosives.

Several years ago, Dougherty completed a two-year explosives debris analysis for the California Council on Criminal Justice.

About the same time he completed academic work for a law degree.

His presence at the Pittsburgh conference was solicited by the Aerospace Corp., which has been contracted by the federal government to help develop a tagging program.

What both local and federal law enforcement agencies desire, Dougherty says, is for manufacturers to mix "taggants," or color-coded particles, in with the explosive chemicals.

When an explosive is detonated, the coded particles would be left among the debris for investigators to analyze. The chemicals would be coded in such a way as to inform investigators which firm manufactured the bomb and from where it was sold or stolen.

Dougherty says it would be impossible to separate the taggants from the other chemicals in the manufactured explosive.

Manufacturers, Dougherty claims, agree with the tagging concept, but they naturally are concerned about cost associated with implementation of the new program.

Dougherty reports that none of the companies want to pass added costs on to their customers.

Funding, therefore, remains to be resolved.

While hesitating to admit that the tagging program is a direct response to increased bombing activity on the part of terrorists, Dougherty confides that the use of explosives by criminals is becoming more prevalent and authorities are getting worried.

In the last three quarters of 1976, Dougherty reports there were 26 terrorist bombings in the state and 352 non-terrorist bombings.

A terrorist bombing is classified as one which is perpetrated by any organization "intent upon overthrowing our political system."

"Even in this county," the criminalist grimly advises, "bombing activity is on the increase. It (bombings) seems to run in spurts, but we are getting a lot of them.

"Here, bombing activity ranges from terrorists exploding a PG&E power tower, to mischievious youths throwing house roof bombs," he added.

A representative of the Department of Justice in Sacramento reports that last year there were 12 bombings in San Mateo County, only one of which was classified as done by terrorists.

The total county bombings represented 2.1 per cent of all the bombings in the state.

In 1975 there were 16 bombings, seven of which were terrorist related.

"Nobody knows yet whether the tagging program will be effective," Dougherty says, "but we are hopeful."

Millbrae Struggles To Define 'Family'

By FRANK LAPIERRE

Millbrae is considered to be a nice, quiet family town of some 21,250, mostly professional people.

What constitutes a "family" is being questioned today, however, by the City Council of the Mid-Peninsula city.

Officials hope that in the not-too-distant future "A City in the Sun," as the chamber of commerce calls Millbrae, will be able to legislate how big, or small, a family should be.

The proposed amendment arose at a recent council meeting.

Mayor Art Lepore agreed, after a brief discussion, to send the matter to the Planning Commission with the definition of "five persons who need not be related by blood, marriage, or adoption" as the acceptable number for a Millbrae household.

What the commission will do with the ordinance is anybody's guess.

The number "five" may be changed, depending on what the public has to say about the proposed law.

Leopore and City Manager Lee Horner indicated the public will have a lot to say about the issue before the matter finally is settled.

Other cities have tried similar ordinances, but courts have ruled them unconstitutional.

Even before the issue has been clearly defined or publicly debated, those privy to the proposal predict stiff opposition.

Observers see the ordinance as a move toward heading off, or closing up, communes, including those operated by religious groups, and houses of prostitution that might try to operate in the city.

Lambs

Both Teri and Donna hope to make careers of agriculture and have their eyes on the goal of showing steer at next year's exposition.

One of the youngest San Mateo County entrants in the exposition is Mary Rodgers, also of South San Francisco.

Mary, 11, brought "Hoppy" — a buck lamb, causing a number of people to tease that "Mary had a little lamb."

Mary, an engaging youngster with long blonde hair and a smile full of braces, was excited about her first show at the Cow Palace.

She grinned as she revealed that she was missing a day at Buri Buri Elementary School.

Mary carded Hoppy carefully, so that "when the shears go through, his wool won't get all tangled."

The youngster raised the animal since "he was about as big as a full-grown cat."

When asked if she were attached to Hoppy, Mary's face clouded a little and she admitted he was the first lamb she's raised from infancy.

"But I've got chickens, rabbits, ducks, quail, dogs and cats in my backyard," she said, brightening up. "I get up and feed them early each morning. I love animals."

available only in San Francisco County, he said.

The county resident must be transported as quickly as possible to critical care centers in San Francisco, Nichols said.

The second reason is that many residents in North San Mateo County are served by physicians and hospitals in San Francisco — especially retired servicemen utilizing Lettermen General.

Nichols said the original intent in limiting the number of San Francisco hospitals to which Medevac could transport patients was to reduce the time they would be out of service.

However, a review of the services' first 90 days since its inception Dec. 1 indicates that out-of-service time is not affected when patients are transported to San Francisco, the manager reported.

He asserted that about 20 patients per month are being transported to San Francisco to hospitals which are no further distance than local facilities.

Deaths

Reports of shots being fired at 448 A St. drew 17 heavily armed police from the Daly City-Broadmoor area to the scene.

Krugler's wife was taken to Mary's Help Hospital for treatment of shock.

It was believed that Cinelli lived at 444 A St., according to Detective Jim Mendiara.

Papan Bill To Reduce Drinking Age

A bill introduced by Assemblyman Louis J. Papan (D-San Mateo), this week (AB-1210) would have allowed 18-year-olds to drink alcoholic beverages in bars and buy such goods in liquor stores.

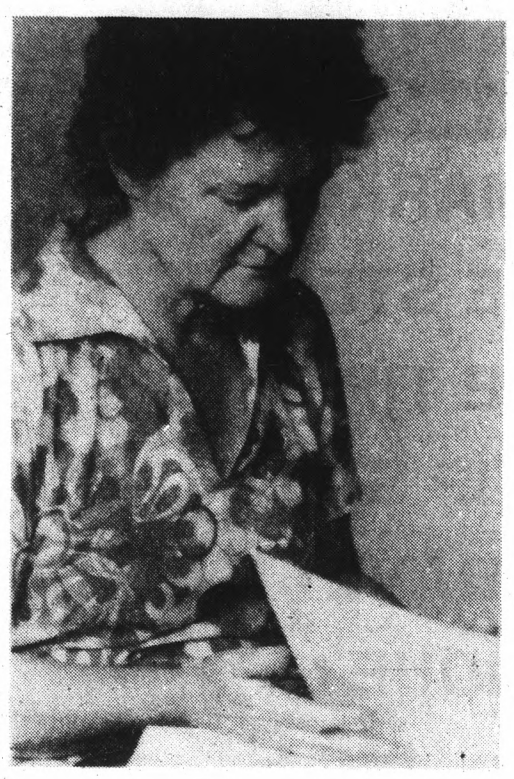
Even before it was out of committee, however, Papan stated he intends to amend the bill to chance the age limit to 19 years old — still below the present age 21 limit.

Papan said he intends to take the action to avoid any conflict with rules governing young people in high schools.

"Drinking by high school students greatly concerns me, and I want to avoid this. That's why I am amending my bill," Papan said.

Asked why he wants the liquor law age lowered, Papan replied: "Currently, they (youth) have full citizen status at age 18. I don't believe in limited citizenship. Young people have the responsibilities that go with full citizenship and I feel this is one of those responsibilities."

Local Peace Corps Worker



PACIFICA'S MISS LILLIAN
Peace Corps volunteer Voy Clay

Fifty-one-year-old Peace Corps volunteer Voy Clay is Pacifica's Miss Lillian.

One of 130 Peace Corps volunteers currently serving in Brazil, Ms. Clay signed up after raising her children. She arrived in Brazil in January 1976.

"I didn't want to live all by myself. I was also a little bored," she said.

The Vancouver-born nurse lived in Canada for 23 years before coming to California. She was most recently with the kidney transplant unit at the San Francisco University Hospital.

She is stationed in Brazil's third largest city, Belo Horizonte, about 150 miles north of Rio de Janeiro.

"I'm now helping at the hospital here to find out how it operates on the nursing level," she says. "It's one of five state hospitals in Belo Horizonte. It has 56 beds. I handle mostly emergencies. We have up to 500 emergency cases a day. Ninety-five per cent of all cases are accidents and heart attacks.

She said the hospital is for all who cannot afford to stay at private hospitals. No patient can stay for longer than a week.

"They have excellent ambulance service and well trained staff," Ms. Clay explained.

"There are only five registered nurses at this hospital. Beds are old and without wheels. In an American hospital every bed is movable. You see some windows open all the time and flies coming in."

When her research is completed, she will suggest to the hospital some means to improve its efficiency. "I'm not ready yet," she says. Asked whether the hospital administration in a male-dominated nation will act on her suggestions, she booms, "Yes, they will!"

"Medical auxiliaries at the hospital listen to me," she adds at another time. "I like them and they like me. They've made up their minds, though, that I'm a missionary. Nothing to the contrary will convince them."

She said there is a critical shortage of medical books at the hospital. She also has found out that companies operating in Brazil "give out monstrous amounts of free surplus and experimental medications.

"The hospital hardly buys any drugs. Self-treatment in this country is cheap. The pharmacists have seen so many cases they can pretty much tell you what's wrong with you. You can get over the counter just about any drug, including penicillin."

Ms. Clay remarked that she is "more comfortable" in Belo Horizonte than in the United States or Canada. She believes the climate is better and "people are friendlier" here.

"Brazil is an amazing country. Look, there are 100 million people out there, but they won't steal from you. Not even the poor in slums. They've been living there all their lives, that's all they know. They're honest people. They don't complain, they're happy. Maybe that's why nobody cares about them."

She said she will fulfill her two-year commitment to Peace Corps service, but would like to move on to the Amazon region to work with the Indians.

Theme Set for Palm Sunday

"Triumphant Entrances and Disastrous Exits" is the theme of the Palm Sunday 10 a.m. worship service at the Daly City United Methodist Church, 1474 Southgate Ave.

On March 25 through 27 the youth fellowship and counselors went on a snow retreat at Lake Tahoe.

Among those attending were Raeann Crescenti, Andy and Kathy Fossum, Melissa Goan, Greg Guisti, Bobby and Pam Perruquet, Ery and Euli Regner, Marcus Sanders, Julie Schneider, Manny Soria, Katie Spencer, Tom Dwope, Sandy Terrell, Marguerite Vall and Ellen Warner.

Counselors included Bob Perruquet, Prentice Sanders, Sally Spencer and Rev. David Swope.

A committee studying the church's facilities has been formed. Serving on it are Shirley Funk, Janet Thompson, Eleanor Guisti, Mike Brodie, Rupert Medina and Bob Perruquet.

Medical Help On the Phone

Since Tel-Med began as a health information service in San Mateo County last April, 24,000 calls have been received, according to volunteers at Mills Memorial Hospital who operate the system via telephone number 347-7711.

Five incoming lines are open to callers from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays and until 4 p.m. on Saturdays. Messages are from three to seven minutes long.

The spread of subjects covers most major health concerns from "I'm just tired, doctor" tape 42, to "Hiccups" tape 36, "Backaches" tape 37 and "Canker Sores and Fever Blisters" tape 309. Callers merely dial 347-7711 and request any one of 175 different taped messages. Twenty frequently called tapes are available in Spanish and English.

Lists of tapes in the Tel-Med library are available at Mills Memorial, public libraries, recreation centers, fire stations, post offices and some pharmacies, bowling lanes and churches. People may also call Tel-Med and request that a list be sent to them at home. Volunteers have distributed some 80,000 brochures.

In the midst of Passover and Easter week, it does seem an excellent time to don something special and that is exactly what the members of the Daly City Senior Citizens Club are doing today.

Hats, the personal creations of each person, are being worn at the luncheon meeting today in the Lincoln Park Memorial building.

The club, sponsored by the Daly City Parks and Recreation department, has a membership of 264 persons and the sight of all those fanciful hats should be something to behold, according to Mrs. Louise Buttle, publicity chairman.

TONIGHT, IN THE parish hall of Holy Angels Catholic Church, localites will have an unusual opportunity to get expert advice on crime prevention on the personal level.

Melvin D. Turner, of C.A.P.T.U.R.E. (Citizen's Active Participation Through Utilization of Relevant Education) will speak on residential burglary, why and how to report a crime, and what to do to prevent personal assault.

The C.A.P.T.U.R.E. program is funded by the Department of Justice and will begin at 8 p.m. in the parish hall. Members of the Holy Angels Women's Guild and friends of the parish are invited to attend. Mrs. Jackie Norman is doing the publicity on this meeting designed to educate the general public on crime prevention.

MRS. VERNA TEGLIA, president of the Friends of the Daly City Library, has made public the names of her appointees to the unit's nominating committee.

Selected to make recommendations for posts on the executive board are Mrs. Olga Canada, Mrs. Denise Schwarzbach, Mrs. Ruth Jarvis, Mrs. Jean Lewin, and Mrs. Ethel Walter. Alternates to the board are Mrs. Frances Lee and Mrs. Betty Martinez.

MEMBERS OF THE Foremost-McKesson Task Force planned and conducted the annual Easter Egg Hunt in Golden Gate Park for the children of men and women in prison.

The hunt was held last weekend with fun and games as well as an appearance by the Easter Bunny followed by an old fashioned egg hunt in the Log Cabin area.

Members of the Task Force are especially excited about the prospect of opening a Half Way House for Women ex-offenders later this month. The group is helping to support the house by the sale of cook books. For more information about helping or to learn how you can purchase a copy of the Hodge Podge Cook Book, contact the Friends Outside Office, 136 Church St. in San Francisco.

ARE YOU INTERESTED in a trip to Alaska?

Mrs. Edna Laurel Calhan, tour director of the Pacifica Fifty Plus Club, is seeking a response to the idea of a tour to Many Glacier Park, Lake Louise, Columbia Ice Fields, the Yukon, Mount McKinley, Kotzbue, Calgary, Glacier Bay, Skagway, and Victoria.

According to Mrs. Calhan, the best time of the year for this jaunt would be August as the mosquito problem is not as great at that time of the year.

The tour would go via the Inside passage to Vancouver Island and visit the Empress Hotel and do many, many more things, Mrs. Calhan said.

If you are interested contact Mrs. Lucille Rentmeester, the club president.

Should you feel Alaska is not your cup of tea, an alternate trip to New Zealand is under consideration. Make your preference known so that definite planning may begin soon.

DALY CITY'S Frank Galo is anxious to contact all graduates of San Francisco's Balboa High school and inform them of a cruise being planned by that school's Alumni Association.

The eight-day tour of the Caribbean aboard the Italian cruise ship Carla C, is scheduled to begin on October 8. Orientation for persons considering joining the tour will be held on April 21 in the Little Theatre on the school campus, 1000 Cayuga St. Prices of this tour begin at $795 per person.

If you are interested drop a note with your name and address to the alumni office, 1000 Cayuga St. and more detailed information will be forwarded to you.

IT WOULD NOT be appropriate to fail to note the passing of Mrs. Emily Friedman. Emily, a victim of the Canary Island air tragedy, was a regular contributor to this column and an indefatiguable supporter of a number of charitable groups. She will be sorely missed by all who knew and worked with her.

WINNERS

South San Francisco Elks Club recently announced its selection of high school seniors for scholarship awards. Winners from Serramonte High School are from left, David Young, fourth place, $25; Katherine Milani, second place, $125; Robert Folles, first place, $175; Janice Lewbin, first place, $175; and Felix Hon, fourth place, $25.

Strong Opinions Voiced In Study on Adoption

Most adult adoptees, birth parents who relinquished children for adoption, and adoptive parents want to accommodate the needs of the other persons in their own "adoption triangle," according to the findings of a Children's Home Society of California research study.

An overwhelming majority of birth parents and adoptive parents participating in the CHS "Changing Face of Adoption" study agreed with adult adoptees that the adopted person who has reached adulthood has the right to his or her own original birth certificate, sealed by law when the adoption was approved by the court.

A higher percentage of birth parents and adoptive parents in the study believed that the adult adoptee has a right to reunion with his/her birth parents, with 29 per cent of the birth parents stating that the adult adoptee has the right to reunion even without the birth parents' consent.

Better than eight out of 10 adult adoptees and birth parents in the study, and three out of four adoptive parents, stated that birth parents should have the right to reunion with the child they relinquished after he/she reaches adulthood.

Chilcren's Home Society says it undertook its study of attitudes with respect to sealed adoption records because so little information has been accumulated about the views and feelings of the three groups of people who would be directly affected by any changes in present law.

In April 1976, CHS published and distributed "The Changing Face of Adoption," a magazine devoted to the many issues that surround the question of what rights, if any, adult adoptees have to information that was sealed by law when their adoption was approved by the court.

In addition to focusing on the question of "rights," the CHS 1976 publication addressed the ramifications of these issues for each of the three groups in the adoption triangle by including questionnaires to be answered and returned to the agency's research department by adult adoptees, birth parents and adoptive parents. CHS supporters interested but not personally involved in adoption were also invited to express their opinions.

The research study report, published under a grant from the Rosenberg Foundation of San Francisco, states that 1,891 questionnaires were tabulated: 309 from adoptees, 106 from birth parents, 995 from adoptive parents, 481 from "others."

The report stated that most of the respondents lived in California, and that 76.6 per cent of the questionnaires were returned with respondents' signatures.

Seventy-seven per cent of the birth parents said that they had made their own decision to relinquish their child for adoption, and 60 per cent of these said they had felt pressure to relinquish the child.

Sixty-three per cent of the birth parents said they felt they had made the right decision; 26.4 per cent said they had made the wrong decision. The older the present age of the birth parent, the less likely she was to report that she had made the right decision.

Half of the adult adoptees who responded expressed dissatisfaction with the information they had about their birth parents. Sixty-eight percent said they wanted a wide range of additional information on their biological background, wanted current information about their birth parents, wanted to know why they had been relinquished.

Birth parents wanted to know if the child they had relinquished was happy, where the child was, what kind of adoptive family the child had.

Children's Home Society will provide single copies of the research report and the spring 1976 magazine as long as copies are available. Inquiries regarding purchase of multiple copies at CHS cost can be directed to the public relations department, 3100 West Adams Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90018.

Toll-free Line Slices Red Tape

State government is now lending a sympathetic ear to business people who have complaints about bureaucratic red tape.

A toll-free number, (800) 952-5502, has been established in the new Office of Business Development to help both small and large businesses cope with complex government regulations and to encourage out-of-state firms to set up shop in the state.

The office recently was created under the Business and Transportation Agency to help combat California being portrayed as "anti-business." Its employees already have been in touch with several out-of-state firms interested in relocating on the west coast.

Wineries Off the Beaten Track

Wine buffs know about the chain of hospitable tasting rooms along the Napa Valley; now there's a sister sipping route on US 101 (The Redwood Highwwy) to the west.

Wine-making is a tradition in the valleys around Santa Rosa, Cloverdale, and Ukiah, just as it is in Napa and St. Helena. Twenty family-style tasting rooms welcome visitors.

Starting at the south end of this abbreviated weekend tour, cross the Golden Gate Bridge and proceed north past Santa Rosa. The Windsor turnoff, first stop, brings motorists to Sonoma Vineyards. It's open daily (10 a.m. to 5 p.m.) and offers a picnic area in an olive grove, winery tours, and samples.

North around Healdsburg are Cambiaso Winery (open Friday through Tuesday), and L. Foppiano (daily, 1 to 4 p.m.). Simi Winery (open daily 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. presents a handsome new redwood public room fronting the venerable stone building housing vats and crushing equipment. Johnson's Alexander Valley Winery is a few miles eastward on SR 128. Tours are by appointment.

Startling in its size and resemblance to some vast Burgundian chateau is Souverain, five miles north of Healdsburg. Tours and tastings are conducted daily (10 a.m. to 4 p.m.) and there's a restaurant open, except Mondays, which features local vintages and spectacular views. Northwest of Healdsburg is Dry Creek Vineyard (open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily).

Nervo Vineyard (est. 1850) is a small family style winery beside the last remaining stretch of freeway near Geyserville, open Wednesday through Sunday. Pedroncelli Winery is worth a mile detour west of Geyersville on a road just north of town. Like many others on this rosy route, Pedroncelli makes a surprising table wine in all colors at budget prices. It's open daily, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Geyser Peak Winery, just north of Geyserville, welcomes the thirsty daily, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. It's a modern facility built by a national brewer on the foundations of an ancient family vinegar works.

Largest and most patronized of the links in the Redwood Highway chain is Italian Swiss Colony at Asti, established in 1881 by immigrants from northern Italy. All they knew was winemaking, and their compatriot Remo Sbarboro financed them into one of the state's more notable growing estates. Today more than 400,000 visitors take the daily tours year around (open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.) and stroll through Sbarboro's romanesque gardens.

North of Cloverdale, at Ukiah, are the state's northernmost vintners: Cresta Blanca, with roadside tasting room; and Parducci Wine Cellars three miles north, in a cool wooded canyon. The brothers Parducci recently built a new tasting palace to showcase their numerous varieties, plus a collection of fancy glassware. Weibel has a tasting room beside US 101 north of Ukiah, roofed in the shape of a champagne glass. Fetzer has a convenient highway taste-box in Hopland.

For those who prefer to explore close to the Bay Area, there are well marked highway loops carrying visitors west from Santa Rosa. Here lie Korbel, noted for its champagnes, near Rio Nido, on the Russian River; Martini & Prati (closed weekends); and Russian River Vineyards, at Forestville.

An eastward swing from Santa Rosa down the Valley of the Moon, where Jack London lived it up, provides opportunity to visit, among others, Kenwood Winery, at Kenwood; Grand Cru Vineyards and Valley of the Moon Winery at Glen Ellen (except Thursdays); and two notable establishments in Spanish colonial Sonoma: Sebastiani Vineyards (est. 1875) with its new tasting room, almost downtown, and the father of them all, Buena Vista (zst. 1857) by Count Agoston Haraszthy.

For maps and information on this vacation region, write Redwood Empire Association, 476 Post St., Swn Francisco 94102 and enclose 50 cents for postage and handling.

DMV Takes Classroom Applications

To make it easier for nearly a half-million high school driver training graduates and their parents, the Department of Motor Vehicles is offering school districts a new service that will move DMV's instruction permit and driver license application process out of the office and into the classroom.

Too frequently, according to Drivers License Division Chief Elmer Brown, the high school student who his successfully completed a driver training course arrives at a Motor Vehicles office "enthusiastic to apply for an instruction permit or a driver's license; but minus the necessary documents. This is frustrating both for the students and their parents who must drive them to and from the DMV office."

Now students and parents alike can avoid these unnecessary trips. A newly designed application form allows the students to fill it out in class under supervision of a driver training instructor. It is then taken home for the parents or guardian to sign.

After all the forms are returned to class, DMV staff will visit those driver training classrooms which have requested the new service to administer written and vision tests and issue instruction permits, all in one visit.

The behind-the-wheel drive test itself will continue to be conducted from DMV offices.

Height, Sex Discrimination of Concern

SSF Considers Revising Its Police Qualifications

By JANET PARKER

A proposed revision in qualifications for new police officers in South San Francisco to conform with antidiscrimination laws will be considered by the city's Personnel Board this month.

Police Chief James Datzman said his department has been concerned for some time that present hiring policies might be challenged in court as discriminatory against women and minorities.

A police department committee has prepared a report asking the Personnel Board to change the standards for police officer applicants.

Datzman said the department has been without a hiring list for several months and has delayed filling a vacancy until the board can act on the proposed revision.

"South San Francisco has been fortunate that its hiring practices and track record concerning the percentage of sworn officers who are members of ethnic minorities have not been subjected to court suit," the report to the board states. "The same can be said of the fact that the city has not yet been challenged for having no women police officers."

Other agencies, the report states, have been challenged in the courts and certain hiring practices have been ruled invalid.

"Learning from the experiences of other agencies, South San Francisco should not feel safe in assuming that it can't happen here," the report states. "The ramifications of recent court decisions render the question, not if it can happen, but when it will happen."

The result of court challenges, it states, has been quota systems in many cities.

In many cases, the report claims, quotas have resulted in the hiring of ethnic minorities and women who would otherwise be unqualified to be police officers.

"It is only an illustration that when agencies have had to act according to court decreed sanctions, they have been less able to properly screen the applicants, because they had to comply with the edicts of the courts according to prescribed schedules," the reprt states.

The present policy establishes a height standard of 5 feet 9 to 6 feet 4 and a weight standard of 155 to 210 pounds for police officers.

The department is proposing that the physical qualification for each applicant be "proportionate weight to height." Weight could only be a disqualifying factor if the applicant is medically determined to be "obese."

The proposed standards also require "excellent physical condition," vision correctable to 20/30 and an absence of hearing diseases.

"These changes in our current police officer position specifications, as well as not restricting prospective applicants to males only, would go a long way toward meeting court decreed requirements, and in attracting women and ethnic minorities to apply for police officer in the city," the report states.

The department proposes to retain the requirement of a high school diploma or an equivalency certificate.

An additional requirement of 15 college units with a C average for those persons holding the equivalency certificate would probably not hold up in court, it is stated.

Datzman also said the department is evaluating the age requirment of 21 to 35 years.

The minimum age, he said, is necessary because officers must be able to enter barrooms. However, the maximum age has been questioned and the department is now asking state Peace Officers Standards and Training officials for a recommendation on the age policy.

Datzman said that in previous testing for police officer vacancies, female candidates either did not pass or did not show up for agility tests.

He said the number of female applicants has been sparse compared to the total number of applicants. Naturally, he said, the minimum height of 5 feet 9 has had an impact on female eligibility.

"We've got to start creating some more flexible standards," Datzman said.

The committee, composed of Officers Bruce Tognetti, Raymond McKeon and Ronald Petrocchi, has been compiling the report for six months.

The Personnel Board received preview reports of the proposal at two earlier meetings.

The board is scheduled to act on the proposed qualification changes at its April 19 meeting.

Datzman said it takes from four to six months to obtain an officer from the time of the initial request.

Smiles as JUHSD Contract Signed

Smiles, jokes and apparent good feeling marked the recent formal signing of the first collective bargaining contract between the Jefferson Union High School District and the American Federation of Teachers Local 1481.

Signing the agreement were AFT president Marcy Ballard and JUHSD Board of Trustees Chairman Ruth Boudinot.

The board unanimously approved the two-year contract after about 30 minutes of discussion.

Board member James Roman took up most of the discussion period, requesting clarification of certain contract language. Chief district negotiator Dr. Harold Tonini obliged.

At one point, Roman asked Mrs. Ballard whether the district teachers agreed with a provision concerning the use of substitute teachers.

"We wouldn't be here if we weren't in absolute complete agreement with Dr. Tonini," Mrs. Ballad stated.

"Why, thank you, Ms. Ballard," Tonini replied in mock surprise. There was generl laughter.

Mrs Boudinot said the signing was "a very historic moment for this district.

"I'm very optimistic where we'll go with this agreement."

A contract was approved by both sides after more than five months of negotiations which at one point included talk of a teachers' strike.

In other business, the board accepted a report on the district's consumer homemaking program from Thomas Redmond, district director of vocational education.

Le Pacini

As baseball season quickly approaches, I present some statistics from last season which interested us, and which might interest you.

If the Giants are to make third place this year (or maybe slip into second) in their tough division, it's going to have to be pitching that does it for them, as all observers seem to agree. Most such observers, however, talk of Giant starting pitching as the team's potential savior.

Keep in mind that Randy Moffitt and Gary Lavelle were the only two pitchers last year from the same team who were among the top 10 relievers in the National League. Lavella had 10 wins and 12 saves; Moffitt 14 saves, six wins.

Speaking of Giants' relief pitchers, only one reliefer in baseball history has ever won the Sporting News fireman of the year award in both leagues. That was former Giants' relief ace Stu Miller, who won it in '61 with the Giants and '63 with Baltimore.

WHEN ONE talks of the Giants finishing third in the Western Division of the NL, one naturally assumes that the one-two teams will be Cincinnati and Los Angeles, and they probably will be. But don't discount Houston, the hint being that the Astros had nine rookie pitchers on their roster at the end of the season with a combined record of 31-55.

I still don't think that the recent movie for television about the Astros meeting the A's in a World Series was prophetic. I knew it was a fantasy when the script called for a rookie to be pulled up from the minors to prop up a sagging Astros pitching staff in the middle of the series. Don't those writers think that any of us know the rules?

Don't bet on the Reds losing their premier position in the NL unless they suddenly all get old and injury prone at the same time. Last year, of the 56 times the first eight of the Reds started, they won 48.

Another surprising stat from '76. The Pirates are always thought of as the free swinging club which doesn't accept walks except as evening exercise after dinner, but last year it was the Phillies who drew the fewest free passes in the NL, with only 397.

Mark Belanger, the smooth Baltimore shortstop, has the highest lifetime fielding average (.975) in baseball history among shortstops who have played at least 10 years.

I NEVER put much stock in fielding averages, because they don't tell you such things as how much ground a fielder covered and how many balls he should have had but couldn't reach. But having watched Belanger over a period of a decade, I KNOW that that fielding average reflects his true ability, because he covers all kinds of ground and hardly anything ever gets through him that might have been a potential out. So in this case, fielding average does tell the story.

This isn't really a statistic, but it's unusual. Lee Mazzilli, the 21-year-old handsome speedster whom the Mets hope can move up from double A classification to give them badly needed team speed and defense in center field, is an ice speed skater who won eight national age-group championships and might have qualified for the Olympics had it not been for baseball.

Also unusual, the Brooklyn native is a genuine ambidextrous player, although he's decided to stick with righthanded throwing because it makes him more versatile. But he will continue to switch-hit.

Mazzilli broke in spectacularly with the Mets at the tag-end of '76, whacking a pinch-hit three run homer in his second time at bat.

He also makes basket catches and slides into bases head-first.

And in 1975, while playing in the California League, he set an Organized Baseball record by stealing seven bases in seven innings!

WELL, the Giants may have lost their leading clutch hitter to Atlanta, and traded their second leading clutch hitter to Chicago, but at least they gained the Cubs' second leading clutch hitter, which is some consolation.

Not only was Gary Matthews the leading Giant in game-winning hits, with 17, but that figure was only one off the league leading total produced by Cincinnati's George Foster — another former Giant, ironically. Others who had 17 game winning hits in the NL last year were Mike Schmidt, the slugging Phillie third sacker and young Pirate outfielder Dave Parker.

Murcer, along with Bill Madlock, had 12 winning hits, as did Pirate outfielder Richie Zisk, Reds first sacker Tony Perez, and Cub outfielder Jerry Morales.

For the record, Rick Monday was the leading Cubbie clutch man with 14, and John Mayberry led the AL with 18.

Note the number of those listed above who are no longer with the clubs with which they produced their clutch hits.

IF ANYBODY wants to know, yes, I like the Willie Crawford and Bob Sperring trade to Houston for Rob Andrews.

Andrews is only 24, a genuine prospect who can run and has a glove, and he knows how to make the DP at second base. He is a commodity that the Giants, in my opinion, desperately need. If he can come anywhere near some of his excellent minor league batting averages, that will just be so much extra topping on the cake.

Sperring would never have been more than a journeyman utility guy for the Giants, and Crawford is 30, has never been outstanding on the bases or in the field, nor an RBI man, despite some respectable batting averages and fair power. In fact, the only time he ever really looked outstanding was when he hit against the Giants.

TRIVIA question of the week: Whose record did Roger Bannister break when he ran the world's first four-minute mile?

He broke the record of the great Swedish miler, Gundar Haegg, who had a best of 4:01.4. Bannister's run took a time of 3:59.4.

LOCAL late flash: No sooner was the ink dry on our item in last week's column about how well former Terra Nova southpaw Bob McClure was doing in the Kansas City camp, than he was traded to Milwaukee as part of a multi-player swap.

North League Scores

By JOHN MURPHY
Correspondent

North Peninsula League teams fared well Monday in the opening day of the Daly City Baseball Tournament at Marchbank Park.

Host Westmoor beat Lowell 8-3, Jefferson struck for two runs in the top of the seventh to edge Burlingame 8-7 and Terra Nova defeated San Rafael 6-2. In other tourney action West Catholic Athletic League entry Riordan pounded Crestmoor 10-3.

The Jefferson-Burlingame match was the day's most interesting contest.

Danny Williams led off the scoring by sending a drive onto the short left field porch to put Burlingame up 1-0.

However, Jeff bounced back with three runs in the third. Ray Morton highlighted that uprising by duplicating Williams' effort with a two-run homer to the same left field spot.

The Indians' lead was short-lived though, as Jeff gave Burlingame back two runs by walking five batters in the bottom of the inning to tie the score 3-3.

Burlingame scratched for an unearned run in the fourth to take a 4-3 advantage, but then Jeff combined three hits, a sacrifice and two errors to score three runs in the top of the fifth.

The Panthers closed to within one on Brett Doran's run-scoring single in the bottom of the inning and then took a 7-6 lead with a pair of runs in the sixth. Rick Laundgren's home run into the wide-open spaces in left-center field sparked Burlingame's two-run sixth.

Jeff put two runners on via walks in the seventh but Burlingame appeared to have the game locked up until committing a crucial error with two away. Nolan Smith scored on the miscue and then Rick Rodriguez' infield single won it for Jeff.

Case of the Vanishing Infield

'Copter Cancels Contest

By JOHN MURPHY
Correspondent

It could only happen in the North Peninsula League.

A baseball game between Terra Nova and Oceana was canceled Friday because of a helicopter.

Now, plenty of games have been canceled because of rain or lack of umpires; et cetera. But a helicopter?

What happened was that Oceana's student body was given an assembly Wednesday by a Marine Corps unit. During the demonstration a huge helicopter which was hovering overhead blew all of the topsoil off Oceana's baseball infield. Thus, the field was deemed unplayable for Friday's game.

Serramonte High's baseball team wasn't as lucky. The Regents didn't have to deal with any helicopters — just El Camino. The unbeaten Colts captured their fifth straight league contest, pounding Serramonte 22-0.

In other NPL games Half Moon Bay scored four unearned runs in the sixth inning to edge Westmoor 4-3 and South San Francisco held off Jefferson 8-5.

Eight El Camino players collected two hits or more in an awesome display of offensive strength.

Leading Camino's hitting parade was Jean Donalaya, who had four hits and two runs-batted-in. The Colts cracked three home runs on the day, two in an 11-run sixth inning.

The shutout was Rich Bordi's fourth of the season. His earned run average is still 0.00. Bordi struck out 13 Regents.

Half Moon Bay took its second straight win by exploiting a porous Westmoor infield. Westmoor committed four errors in HMB's four-run sixth inning to open the gates.

Ironically, losing pitcher Chris Toohey pitched well for Westmoor, yielding only one hit to HMB's Mark Sawrey. Westmoor collected only four hits off of winner Hank Reyes, but bunched three of them into the fourth inning to score three times.

"We're starting to come around now," HMB coach Paul Smith commented. "We're making fewer mental mistakes then we were earlier in the season. Also, we took advantage of our opponents' errors today, and that's a good sign."

SSF lefthander Matt Allio dug the Warriors out of a tough jam in the sixth inning to preserve the win. Allio entered the game with the bases loaded in the sixth and escaped untouched.

South City then tallied two times in the bottom of the inning to stretch its lead to 8-5. Greg Romer, who started for the Warriors, picked up the win.

Tiger Delacruz had a two-run homer to pace SSF's attack.

VERSATILE COLT

El Camino High's Jean Donalaya has a fastball that's feared by North Peninsula League batters. but even when he's not pitching he's fearsome; while Rich Bordi was registering the Colts' eighth shutout Friday Donalaya was rapping four hits and driving home two runs in a 22-0 win over Serramonte.

Bocci Is Top CSM Wrestler

College of San Mateo's Gary Bocci came away with most of the honors in the CSM's annual Awards Banquet held recently at Denny's Restaurant in San Mateo.

In addition to being named "Outstanding Wrestler" of the season, Bocci was also awarded trophies for Most Take Downs and Most Pins.

Other awardes went to Tony Malolo (Fastest Pin), Rich Vago (Most Improved Wrestler) and Lars Jensen (Team Captain). The Bulldog wrestlers finished fourth in the NorCal Community College large division championships and ended the season with a 12-5 record.

Westmoor, TN Swimmers 3-0

Terra Nova high schools improved their North Peninsula League swim records to 3-0 with easy wins Friday.

Terra Nova swamped Jefferson 124-27, Westmoor clobbered El Camino 112-52 and South City stopped Oceana 111-36.

Jay Bontrager posted a qualify double for the Tigers in the 200 and 100 frees. Anthony McCarley was another double winner.

Jim Stockman doubled for Westmoor in the 200 IM and fly. Mike Collett clocked a 1:07.2 in the breaststroke, just two-tenths off the NPL record.

Bruce Crossfield and Mark Flowers doubled for South City in its easy win. Oceana's frosh-soph remained undefeated with a 96-73 win over SSF.

NPL Track Roundup

Regents 'Rally'

Serramonte High's North Peninsula League favorite track team got a scare Thursday before downing visiting Half Moon Bay 74-63.

After the track events Serramonte, which had switched many of its stronger performers around, was leading only 42-41. But the Regents, with a couple of clutch performances, pulled the meet out in the field events.

In other NPL meets South San Francisco edged El Camino, 69-61, Terra Nova beat Jefferson, 104-24, and Westmoor topped Oceana, 86-41.

Serramonte got some much-needed points from double distance winner Roger Campos. And in the field Joel Henderson, taking over for triple jump ace Lorens Lebherz (who was sitting out the competition) won with a 42-1 effort.

Terra Nova's Terry Gettle won three individual events (the low hurldes, long jump and triple jump) and led off the victorious mile relay team against Jefferson. Gettle triple jumped just 41-5, but had gone 45-4¾ earlier in the week. Kevin Gillete also won three events for the Tigers. Chris Gutterres, Don Howard and Scott Finley were double winners.

Westmoor got a 2:00.4 half mile from Jeff Maxwell and wins in the horizontal jumps from Marv Soto. Oceana's Bill Ribera won the high hurdles, low hurdles and 100, and anchored the winning 440 relay team.

Director of PRISM Out

County officials today are searching for a new project director for the planned criminal justice-sharing information computer system for the county and its 19 cities.

A spokesman said today that the "paperwork" has been implemented to terminate Dick Spence as project director for the Participatory Records and Information System (PRISM).

His ouster was recommended March 30 by a policy board for the project.

The formality was carried out Thursday by the Department of Building Construction and General Services, under which Spence technically is employed. He will be retained as a consultant to the project, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. and PRISM policy board member William Larsen.

Spence's removal was asked because of his alleged failure to formulate a timetable to depict the virtues of the computer sharing system to city councils in San Mateo County.

The system is in its second year of design.

A third-year federal grant of $224,000, necessary to complete design and implementation of the unique system, will not be granted by the California Criminal Justice Council in Sacramento unless the county and its cities can demonstrate that they intend to commit themselves financially to the future operation of the system.

The annual operation cost is estimated to be $200,000.

The system is designed to provide important police information quickly. It also will contain and disperse information pertinent to the courts and lawyers.

The policy board has lamented that the process to obtain commitments from cities purportedly is lagging.

The board is hopeful that cities and the county will be in positions to sign a joint powers agreement by the end of June.

Larsen said that the PRISM policy board, which was appointed last year by the County Board of Supervisors, has formed an ad-hoc committee to find a replacement for Spence, possibly by April 12.

Hark! Lend an ear. From every high school comes a sound. It's a sound of sweetness, a sound of effort, of singing voices being tuned to render notes that were produced for stages far away. It's a sound of voices being modulated to speak in tones strange to California kids. It's a sound of education as children train for spring plays or musicals.

The high schools of our area do plays that challenge the fiber of every child who appears in them and of every teacher who directs them. They are dramas that "show the face of nature and civilization in our country," as Henry James wrote. To produce them as high school plays requires the strength of Hercules and the patience of Job.

Serramonte High School has chosen "West Side Story" for its spring production. Here is a modern tale fastened to an ancient grid, with Romeo coming forth as the leader of a New York mob and Juliet reincarnated as a gang leader's sister. The action is sweetened by the music of Leonard Bernstein and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim.

Diane Streeter and Jan Gainor are the directors of the Serramonte High School production which is scheduled for May 6-7, 13-14 and if enough people are interested in attending, on May 20-21 as well.

Oceana High School is rehearsing for a spring concert featuring the musicians who attend that school. The director of the concert is Mr. Shedd, the music teacher.

For its spring production, Westmoor High School has chosen a screen play entitled "David and Lisa." It is a story of the return to health of two mentally ill adolescents. David, whose illness borders on schizophrenia, and Lisa-Muriel, who is a divided person, find the road to health in their interest in each other.

Producing such a play will be a challenge indeed to the director, Ken Brown and his cast. The production is scheduled for May 5, 6 and 7.

Mr. Crawford at South San Francisco High School is directing a full cast in Sandy Wilson's delightful play, "The Boyfriend." It is set for May 21-24.

Even now Terra Nova High School is producing Agatha Christie's classic, "Witness for the Prosecution," which has been called "one of a half dozen works by Ms. Christie that is consistently entertaining, however often it is presented." The dates for the play are March 31 and April 1-2.

At El Camino High School, Elizabeth Marr has just finished directing a cast in "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," which was a great undertaking for the school.

Jefferson High School, under the director Linda Clemons, produced "Here and Now" in January and is looking forward to a spring production that has yet to be announced.

The excellence of these plays and the willingness of the directors and the students of the various high schools to present them, recalls Margot Berthold's words, "The theater is a living thing. Whether it enthralls, appalls, depresses, amuses, confuses or enlightens the spectator, it thrives on his strong reaction."

The high schools need the support of the people of the area. Join the audiences. You will be delighted if you do.

County Warned On Bid

The State Department of Health has been ordered to rescind its directive to all counties not to sign service contracts with a company currently under state and federal investigation or to appear in court to show why the directive is proper.

The order was made Thursday by Superior Court Judge Melvin Cohn in Redwood City. He set a show cause hearing for April 7.

Unicare, a San Jose firm under investigation for the possible misuse of some $2 million in federal Medicare funds and an unspecified amount of state MediCal funds, filed suit this week against the Department of Health and the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors.

The suit claims that both agencies acted illegally last week when they cancelled a contract to provide homemaking and chore services for the elderly in the county.

The law, the suit maintains, allows the Department of Health only to "approve or modify," not cancel county or state contracts with firms which receive state MediCal funds.

County supervisors learned to their surprise last week that a $606,660 contract they had awarded to Unicare March 3 had not been ratified by the Department of Health.

The supervisors cancelled the contract when told of the state decision by Dr. Howard Gurevitz, assistant to the director of the county Health and Welfare Department.

Police Insurance Left Hanging

No action was taken Thursday by the Broadmoor Police Commission on a liability insurance proposal which would allow the Police Department to operate as an independent entity.

The proposal, for a $24,500-a-year liability coverage policy to be handled by Foster City insurance agent, died for lack of a second on a motion made by Commissioner Wayne Johnson.

Commission Chairman John McCloskey and Commissoner Dean Davenport declined to take action on the proposal at Thursday's meeting.

McCloskey told the audience of 15 that he is "concerned about the financial impact" of the insurance proposal on the unincorporated community.

Both he and Davenport said the commission has not been given an estimate of what it would cost to continue a police services arrangement with Daly City.

Since Jan. 1, the Daly City Police Department has administered, under contract, police services for Broadmoor. The arrangement was made for a six-month period after liability insurance for the Broadmoor Police Department was canceled.

Davenport pointed out that the commissioner and the commission's four-person Citizens Advisory Committee has met with Daly City officials only once on whether to continue a contract after June 30.

Another Broadmoor-Daly City meeting is scheduled for April 7, and the Police Commission has agreed to hold a commission meeting April 8 to further discuss the insurance question.

Johnson said the $24,500 "and possibly lower" offer from insurance agent Gregory Comaroto is good for almost a month.

Johnson explained that the agent's offer is for coverage through a Los Angeles-based insurance company, which he declined to name.

Johnson said he is wary of making the company's name public because he suspects that Broadmoor's insurance negotiations have been sabotaged by unknown persons.

He also cited an unnamed Daly City firm which withdrew an almost firm offer because it believed other arrangements had been worked out.

McCloskey said, however, that the insurance company would have to be checked out before the commission makes a decision.

Another insurance offer, for $18,000 in liability coverage from Levinson Brothers of San Francisco, was ruled out by the commission through inaction. The offer expired March 31.

Commissioners agreed that the Camaroto offer probably is more promising because of its $500 deductible provisions and the inclusion of collision liability.

Johnson agreed to check on the legality of premium financing, which would allow the commission to make a series of nine payments per year.

Commission Reset Session on Demand

Broadmoor's Police Commission met March 30—for about 10 minutes.

The special session was continued until March 31 after this newspaper notified the commission that the newspaper would challenge the body for violating state law.

Rather than face a challenge for possible violation of California's Brown Act concerning conduct of public agencies, the Police Commission unanimously agreed to adjourn the meeting for a day.

Commission members said they acted on advice from San Mateo County Deputy Dist. Atty. George Camerlengo.

The newspaper charged that no formal notice had been given of the special meeting, as is required by state law.

The Brown Act provides that a special meeting may be called by a presiding officer or majority of a public agency "by delivering personally or by mail written notice to each member of the legislative body and to each local newspaper of general circulation, radio or television requesting notice in writing.

"Such notice must be delivered personally or by mail at least 24 hours before the time of such meeting as specified in the notice," the Brown Act continues.

Commission secretary Dean Davenport conceded that a meeting notice had not been mailed to the local press. He said he didn't know formal notice was required for special sessions.

Camerlengo said the commission would have been liable for legal action if the contested meeting had been held.

"I'm glad they decided not to hold the meeting," he said.

Easter Trimmings

Nell Norton

Good morning, good cooks.

Your children may not agree, but along with the chocolate Easter bunnies, jelly beans and hard-cooked eggs, something more substantial should be served on Easter Day. If ham is your choice, and a tasty choice it is, this first recipe for a broccoli and rice casserole would go nicely with it.

BROCCOLI AND RICE CASSEROLE

1 box frozen chopped broccoli
1 cup water
1 cup rice, quick-cooking variety
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onion
2/3 cube butter or margarine
1 can cream of chicken soup, undiluted

Pour the one cup water over the one package broccoli. Heat until broccoli is thawed. Stir in the one-cup quick-cooking rice, one-half cup celery, one-fourth cup onion, two-third cube margarine and one can undiluted cream of chicken soup. Stir over low heat until butter is melted and ingredients are thoroughly blended. Pour into buttered casserole dish, 1½ quart size. Cover and bake in preheated 300 degree oven for one hour.

Makes six medium servings.

An attractive dessert for Easter would be this easy to make and delicious pie.

MANDARIN CHEESE PIE

1 package (3 oz.) Neufchatel cheese
1 tablespoon milk
A 9-inch baked pie shell
2 11 oz. cans mandarin oranges, drained
1 tablespoon corstarch
6 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoons almond extract
Yellow food coloring

Blend the three ounces cheese with one tablespoon milk until smooth. Spread over bottom of baked and cooled pie shell. Place in refrigerator to chill.

Drain the two cans mandarin oranges and reserve liquid. Place the drained orange segments over the cheese in pie shell.

If necessary, add enough water to the liquid from the oranges to make ¾ cup. Slowly add the orange liquid to the one-tablespoon cornstarch in small saucepan. Add the six tablespoons sugar, cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove from heat and cool.

Add the fourth teaspoon almond extract and a few drops yellow food coloring to cooled liquid. Pour over orange segments and chill until set.

Serves six.

"Reflections Byzantium," a collection of paintings by local artist and teacher Vicki Lavorini, will be on display in April at the Serramonte branch of the Daly City Public Library. Painted in acrylics on gold leaf, the works are bordered with mixed media materials which resemble stones and metal, in the style of Byzantine icons. The above painting, "Icon Madonna," was a group project completed by Mrs. Lavorini's acrylics class at Westmoor Adult School. Mrs. Lavorini has taught painting at Westmoor for the past 10 years.

SSF Youth Contests High School's Hair Code

By JANET PARKER

An El Camino High School student is splitting hairs over his school's dress code policy.

The furor over long hair that rocked schools across the country in the 1960s is being revived — this time as a question of sex discrimination.

Richard Johnson says what's good for the boys is good for the girls and he's asked for a ruling by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to prove it.

The 16-year-old junior says the dress code at his school which requires his hair to be cropped above the eyes and shirt collar is a violation of federal sex discrimination laws.

Federal guidelines prohibit sex discrimination in educational institutions that receive federal financial assistance of any kind.

But, Principal Robert Keropian, whose own dark hair is neatly styled, says he still maintains a dress code on his campus in South San Francisco for legitimate reasons.

"We feel very strongly that in addition to having high academic standards, we have a responsibility in training students to be well groomed — to be employable after they graduate," Keropian stated.

Keropian says separate dress codes for high school girls and boys are justified.

"I say as long as boys and girls are anatomically and physiologically different, there will always be differences in grooming standards," Keropian said.

"If there were no differences, then what would you do if a boy came to school in a dress with high heel shoes on?" he asked.

Richard, who lives with his mother, said his hair became a problem in November. At the time, he said, his hair fell below his shoulders.

He recalls being stopped on campus by Keropian who told him to come back to school when his hair was cut.

He said he was out of school three days when he decided to cut his hair.

"But every time it grew back it was the same thing," Richard said. He met several times with Vice Principal Mark Avelar who reminded him of the school's dress code policy.

Among other guidelines for boys, the policy states simply that: "Hair shall not extend over the eyes or shirt collar."

The guidelines also state that socks must be worn at all times, that shorts are prohibited and that beards may not be worn.

The only guidelines for girls relating to hair grooming prohibit hair curlers, clips and head coverings.

Richard said he stayed out of school five different times when school officials told him not to come back until his hair was cut.

Keropian, however, pointed out that Richard was never formally suspended.

"If he stayed out of school, he did so on his own," Keropian said.

Finally, Richard met with then acting Supt. Thomas Gaffney and a South San Francisco Unified School District coordinator, Mrs. Pat Ross.

They in turn contacted Deputy Dist. Atty. Lee Port, who reportedly ruled that a dress code or grooming code must be established for reasons of safety or sanitation and cleanliness.

However, both parties, Richard said, decided that Mrs. Port's ruling is only an opinion, and that a formal opinion should be obtained.

Richard said that earlier this month, he trimmed his hair twice — neither time meeting the specifications of school officials.

He finally returned to school March 24, with his hair trimmed to just above his shoulders.

In the meantime, Richard obtained the help of Gaffney and Mrs. Ross in filing a complaint with the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) in San Francisco.

An official there said the complaint was forwarded to the office in Washington, D.C.

Nationally, the spokesman said, about 10 per cent of the complaints filed with the OCR last year involved disputes over hair length, many of them from southern states.

In the western region, however, less than six complaints have been received, including Richard's.

He said all the complaints will be studied by the Washington office and eventually a nationwide policy will be established.

There have been approximately 40 federal court cases in recent years concerning hair length and sex discrimination, he said, and judges' opinion have been split down the middle supporting both the students and the schools.

Richard, who attends South San Francisco High School the first two periods of the day and then transfers to El Camino, said there's no legal basis for denying boys and not girls the right to wear long hair.

He said school officials have told him long hair is not safe for metal shop classes. Yet, he said, girls are permitted to wear their hair long.

"I don't think there is any way he can do this," Richard said.

Keropian fought a similar battle several years ago and won in the courts. Courts have repeatedly ruled that schools can regulate grooming standards for students, he said.

However, Richard said the current question involving sex discrimination should once and for all be settled by OCR officials.

Keropian insists that the El Camino High School grooming code has contributed to the success of many students.

"We make no apologies for having standards that may be higher than in other districts," Keropian said.

In order to succeed in the employment field, young adults must learn to comply with employer's standards, he said.

"No matter where he goes the rest of his life he's going to be told what to wear and what to do," Keropian said. "He might as well learn it while he is in school."

Keropian said the school's grooming code was developed from a questionnaire sent to more than 3,000 parents and business leaders in 1961. The policy has been revised several times since then, he said, including just last year.

Students have been cutting their hair and complying with the rule for 16 years, he said.

"Once in a while something like this comes up and we are criticized for our high standards," Keropian said.

"If the ruling by OCR is in favor of the student, there will be no hard feelings, Keropian said. But should OCR rule that schools do have the right to establish separate grooming policies for girls and boys, he expects Richard and every other boy with long hair to see a barber.

"He has agreed and we have agreed that whatever the ruling is, both parties will comply," Keropian said.

Membership Month for DC Friends of Library

April is Membership Month for The Friends of the Daly City Library, according to Mrs. Alvin Schwarzbach, membership chairman.

The Friends have received statewide and national recognition for efforts on behalf of the Daly City Libraries. During the past 21 years, they have supported cultural activities, stimulated community interest in activities of the Daly City Libraries, helped secure better library service for the entire community, and raised funds for the library.

The Friends' popular book review series, which is one of the oldest in continuous existence in the state, is provided as a community service and are open to the public admission free. At least two additional free programs of general interest are scheduled each year.

Two book fairs are undertaken annually. Forthcoming is a two-day sale to be held May 20-21 at the Westlake Mall.

The Friends have donated the initial collection of large-print editions for the visually handicapped and $250 for the initial collection of pre-school books for the Serramonte Library, and sums for a Spanish language collection and Philippine heritage books.

Other initial collections established have been phonograph records, 8 mm films and art prints.

PBX Clubs Planning Convention

Helen Williams, president, PBX Clubs of California and a member of Peninsula PBX Club, will conduct the meetings when they hold their 18th annual convention, April 21-24, at The Sacramento Inn, Sacramento.

Peninsula PBX Club met April 1 for a potluck dinner at the home of Doris Dettner in Daly City to make convention plans. They discussed the open house and worked on campaign material for Kay S. Kerst, who is running for vice-president of PBX Clubs of California.

Agriculture And Home Ec Scholarships

Students who specialize in agriculture or home economics are eligible to apply for $500 scholarships from the California Farm Bureau Federation.

To qualify for a scholarship, students must have a record of outstanding scholastic achievement, extra curricular activities and leadership abilities. Consideration is also given to financial need. Recipients must attend a four-year college or university in California.

Fifteen scholarships were awarded to students in California last year.

Seniors Up For Adoption

Joe Bavaresco is starting an organization in which interested families or individuals can "adopt" a senior citizen.

Working on a one to one basis, a senior who is "adopted" can share a family's holidays and celebrations, go with them on outings and participate in family life. The "adoptive" family or individual will assist the senior citizen in filling out forms, provide necessary transportation, help him or her obtain the many benefits that are available and, most of all, be a companion.

Contact Bavaresco at 563-0667 to arrange interviews or to discuss any aspects of this project.

DC Seniors To Hear Papan Aide

Richard Silver from Assemblyman Louis J. Papan's office will speak at the April 11 meeting of Daly City Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) at the Westlake Community Center, 145 Lake Merced Blvd., Daly City.

A social hour will precede the business meeting, which starts at noon.

Members can take bag lunches and coffee, and cake will be served for 25 cents. Silver will speak on "The Living Will and Right to Die" — but also will answer other questions of senior citizen concern.

District Expects Funds

Officials of the San Mateo County Community College District unveiled their preliminary 1977-78 budget recently.

It represents a 7 per cent increase in the total budget over the current year.

The new budget is estimated at $36.2 million. This year's is just over $34 million.

According to Chancellor Glenn Smith, the district's projected tax rate will drop by about 10 cents.

However, because of an anticipated 23 per cent rise in countywide assessed valuation, the district will bring in significant new dollar amounts next year, even with the reduction in the tax rate.

Still, Smith told district trustees Wednesday, the district doesn't expect to even approach its maximum permissible tax rate next year.

Declared Smith, "We didn't go for the maximum and then work backwards. The go-for-broke theory is not justified."

Including an unused three cents from its community services override, the district will not use a total of 8.7 cents next year, if the trustees approve this plan sometime in August.

The 8.7 cents represents more than $1.8 million in revenues the district, for now, has chosen not to reap.

For each penny on the new tax rate of 69 cents the district generates an estimated $331,000.

The district, which is predicted to grow by just over 3 per cent in student numbers next year, is annually the most expensive public education operation in this county.

It dwarfs everything else.

This year alone, there is a grand total of more than 31,000 students attending classes at the district's three schools.

Revenues for community colleges in California are not figured by the same formula applied to elementary and high school districts.

The rules governing the colleges have drastically changed in the last year. But, in essence, wealthy districts, such as this one, are penalized for their high assessed valuations.

Wednesday night's special meeting was the first chance the trustees have had to review the new budget. They will continue to examine it as the spring and summer months roll by.
